

Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Texas was founded in 1846 by German immigrants. The town boasts a population of 10,530 residents and has spectacular views of Texas Hill Country. Fredericksburg has retained much of its German history, with many of the older buildings keeping their original German styles.

In fact, the town's original inhabitants refused to speak English and founded a new dialect called Texas German. The history of Fredericksburg is rich and the town has many exciting places to stay and things to do.
